

VoxTable Caller Privacy & AI Notice

Short-form call disclosure templates for venue configuration

Version 2.1 | Effective 27 August 2026

These templates are designed to be short enough for a telephone greeting while giving callers clear notice. The restaurant/venue remains responsible for selecting wording appropriate to its location, processing purpose and recording configuration.

1. Recommended opening notice - recorded and transcribed calls

Hello, you've reached [Venue]. I'm the venue's AI assistant. This call is recorded and transcribed to handle your booking or order. You can ask for a person at any time. How can I help?

2. Recommended opening notice - transcription without stored audio

Hello, you've reached [Venue]. I'm the venue's AI assistant. I process what you say to handle your booking or order, and a transcript may be kept by the venue. You can ask for a person at any time. How can I help?

3. UK implementation note

The venue should provide privacy information that identifies the venue as controller for its caller/booking purposes and explains the purpose, lawful basis, recipients/processors, retention, rights and route to further information. Biteperk provides the technology and processes the configured caller data under the DPA unless Biteperk independently determines a separate purpose.

4. Australia implementation note

The venue should ensure the opening disclosure and recording configuration comply with applicable Commonwealth, State and Territory privacy, surveillance and listening-device requirements. The appropriate notice or consent approach can vary by jurisdiction and use case.

5. Sensitive information

If a caller volunteers allergy, medical, disability, religious or other sensitive information, the AI Agent should collect only what is necessary for the venue's operational purpose and follow the venue's escalation policy. VoxTable should not be treated as a substitute for trained staff on safety-critical matters.
